Fruitland United Methodist Church is a small but strong congregation with average attendance of 45, located on the Oregon-Idaho border. They are known as the “big green church just off Main Street.” Fruitland is a community with high quality schools and medical facilities, less than an hour from Boise. They are historically tied to agriculture.

They are a fairly traditional congregation who are open to new ideas. They appreciate relevant preaching. They are facing the challenge of needing to grow by reaching out to their growing community. They have a large, modern parsonage.

This is a half-time position for someone with energy and enthusiasm who is community minded.
